

How to Get Rid of Bed Bugs From Your Home

Bed bugs are some of the most difficult pests to get rid of. In the recent era, bed bugs have undergone resurgence and have built up a resistance against the common pesticides.

A Complete Guide to Treat Bed Bugs and Get Rid of them Completely.

Treating bed bugs can be a long and time-consuming procedure, and can take from weeks to months. Complete bed bug elimination depends on the extents of infestation.

Identify the Issue

- Recognize the bed bug bites. Bites mostly happen during the night and resemble mosquito bites. If bed bug infestation is serious, then these bites can occur during the daytime as well. Unlike mosquito bites, these bites can cause intense itching.
- Blood stains on your bed sheet is another indication of bed bug infestation.

Perform the Required Treatment

- Wash the curtains, clothing, bedding and other necessary things in hot water and use highest dryer settings to dry them. Or you can let them dry under the sun.
- Remove bed bugs and their eggs by scrubbing using a stiff bristle brush.
- Vacuum your bed and upholstery thoroughly. When the vacuuming is completed, put the vacuum cleaner bag in a plastic bag and seal it. Throw the bag outside immediately.

Prevent Bed Bug Infestation

- Always use a protective cover on your mattress and box spring, so, there are no hiding spots for the bed bugs.
- If you are buying a secondhand furniture or bed, make sure there are no signs of bed bug infestation.

Hire the Professional Help

Bed bug control can be achieved by regular cleaning of your home and fixing their hiding place. But getting rid of them completely demands chemical treatment. And applying chemical around your bedding is certainly harmful to your and your family's health.
